Treating trauma through Shakespeare and Science.

Even More Resources:

Earlier today we shared an email from the VA providing resources for Veterans, Family of Veterans and others who are struggling as a result of recent events in Afghanistan. The response was immediate, thank you and please continue to respond and share that information.

We also received responses from partners whom we have personal relationships with and whom have asked us to share their information. We know these folks, we trust these folks, and we endorse these folks.

So here they are... a partial list for now...

Carrie and Taruno Steffensen are friends and colleagues at Meadows Behavioral Healthcare.

As someone in recovery, I know, first hand, what times like this can do to one's sobriety. Carrie and Taruno reached out to let me know that where they treat addiction, Meadows Behavioral Healthcare, accepts Tricare.

If someone is struggling and in need of a residential or inpatient level of care because of what this crisis has brought up, reach out to them at: 602-740-2565. They can speak to you about what Meadows can offer. For more information please visit: Tricare Network Providers for Military Veterans HERE.

We would be remiss if we did not also mention our friend and colleague Dr. Bessel van der Kolk's Trauma Research Foundation.

His Book The Body Keeps the Score has been not only a bestseller, but also an invaluable resource in healing trauma. And his Foundation offers online classes in every area of healing. Whether you are a clinician or someone looking for help, TRF has a lot of resources. For course offerings, or more information please visit Trauma Research Foundation's Website HERE.

If you are in the Fort Worth/Tarrant County area we want to offer two invaluable resources:

- 1) Veterans Court-Tarrant County, Texas--The Veterans Court Diversion Program is a diversion program for Justice Involved Veterans (JIV) who are currently facing prosecution for one or more criminal cases. The program offers offenders a treatment option that is judicially supervised. It is designed to divert JIV out of the traditional criminal justice process and into appropriate rehabilitative alternatives.
- 2) LaJohn McDonald--he provides resources and referrals for veterans, service members and their families. Along with individual and group support for military veterans who are justice involved or transitioning back into civilian life. He also offers training and facilitation of potential mentors and peer specialist. LaJohn can be reached at lajohn.mcdonald@mhmrtc.org

Finally, we have also received inquiries asking how to help refugees.

So we are sharing this link from Stars & Stripes:

New York-based HIAS is urging people to volunteer and donate to support resettlement efforts, and it has partnered with Airbnb, where people can offer to host refugee families and others in need of a place to stay. HERE is that link
